

Small Changes, Big Results: Successfully Adopting Today's Construction Tech

---

Written by: Samantha Rookey, Solution Engineer, InEight, Inc.

Whether it's increased productivity, decreased manual effort, or removal of duplicate steps, all are a part of streamlining a project and simplifying the work for their benefit as well as the company's. An employee who understands clearly what they will gain may be more willing to use new software. Seeing

---

About the Author

---

Samantha Rookey is a solution engineer at InEight, Inc. She supports the company's dynamic business development team in educating and enabling practical solutions for current and future customers. Previous to InEight, Samantha held several in-field leadership positions as a project engineer, manager, and estimator across a variety of project types.

---

About the Article

---

This article is republished from the InEight Behind the Build online blog. InEight provides field-tested construction project management software for the owners, contractors, engineers, and architects who are building the world around us. Customers worldwide rely on InEight for real-time insights that help manage risk and keep projects on schedule and under budget across the entire life cycle.

Any views and opinions expressed in this article may or may not reflect the views and opinions of the Construction Management Association of America (CMAA). By publishing this piece, CMAA is not expressing endorsement of the individual, the article, or their association, organization, or company.